Are You in the Right Language? Need More Help? Visit the Adobe Help Center. Adobe Photoshop is a tool used by millions of people every day. But, do you know why Photoshop is so great? The answer is so simple that

Adobe never makes you think about it; it's the eye candy. First, let's see how an image is made in Photoshop. Making an Image Essentially, Photoshop is a drawing tool that transforms digital images into representations of things visible to the human eye, or the users' target environment, such as monitors or a printed page. You can see a digital image on your computer screen, such as this book. Image courtesy of Adobe Most of the tools available in Photoshop are tools that let you perform a variety of functions to change the appearance of a digital image and make it more personal or professional. The ones you probably use most often are the ones you've selected and dragged to the canvas and named using text. These are the tools of image editing: Painter: A rectangle or square that you draw onto the canvas. You can fill this shape with an area color or gradient, and you can make it transparent. Raster: These are the pixels of any image displayed on your computer screen. You can add special raster effects to images and make them unique by adjusting the hue, saturation, and contrast, or use the Healing and Retouching tools to fix problems in images. You can also change the resolution of an image to make it more or less pixelated, and adjust the size of an image and its font. Layer: This layer allows you to organize and group pixels together in a digital file. You can add text to a layer, move and resize it, and adjust its hue, saturation, and contrast. When you select a layer, it is the equivalent of selecting a particular part of the image that you want to modify. Clipping Path: This path is the border of the image. It's a part of the image that's not visible on the image display, and you can add details to this path. You can shape this clipping path by defining a complex polygon and adding text to it. Adjustment Layer: You can choose to create a new Adjustment Layer, or select one from the Adjustments palette. The Adjustments palette contains several tools, such as Hue/Saturation, Levels, Shadows, and Highlight/Key. All of Dedicated Web Server Home Does your organization have a website? If not, you may want to consider having a dedicated web server running at your organization for your website. You can get the best of both worlds by having a dedicated web server installed for your own use and a web site for your organization that is hosted externally by WorldWide Technologies. What is a Dedicated Web Server? A dedicated web server is a machine running a web server and dedicated to serving your web site. It is independent from other servers on your network and typically has its own dedicated network connection to your ISP. If you don't have your own dedicated web server, you'll need to use either a free host at one of the web hosting service providers or use one of the our packaged solutions (see below). What should you consider before you add a web server? Do you want to add a web server? Is there a web server running in your network already? If you don't want to add a web server, you can benefit from one of our web hosting service packages. What is a dedicated network connection? All servers have a network connection attached to them. They also need a network connection to the internet. A dedicated network connection is when your ISP provides you with your own dedicated high speed connection to the internet and your server can reach the internet only on that connection. Why not use a web hosting service provider? There are many web hosting service providers out there. However, if you look at a few of the larger hosting service providers, such as HostGator or HostMonster, you'll find that the cheapest of their plans often include a web server. Instead of paying the web hosting service provider to host your own web server, you can add a web server to one of their free packages and use it just for your web site. Benefits of a Dedicated Web Server You don't need to go through the hassle of setting up and maintaining a web server on your network You can use a web server that's dedicated to only your web site If there's a web server running in your network, you're less likely to be compromised by spyware or viruses Cost? Do you really want to host your own web server? It can be a huge time commitment. You have to purchase and install your own web server software. You also need to invest in a physical machine, install the server operating system and the web server
