Nintendo News Blog 2015-08-25: Wii U People Can't Get Enough of Fighters Old and New - Nintendo Life

Taking the top-down approach to the majority of fighters that have been released recently, 2D fighter 'Hatsune Miku: Project Diva F' is getting some love from the embattled Wii U. Originally released on PS3 and PS Vita in 2014, the Hatsune Miku: Project Diva has proven itself to be a solid addition to the fighting game genre, offering an abundance of content for newcomers, but also allowing those with a bit more experience to immerse themselves in the world of Project Diva. And so the same content that's on offer on PS3, Vita and PS4 is cross-platform, meaning that those who bought the original title will also be able to download the content from the Nintendo eShop.

Over on GamesIndustry, my colleague Oisin McGann presents a video interview with the game's director, Watanabe:

Hatsune Miku Project Diva F is also getting a sequel this year, titled Hatsune Miku: Project DIVA Future Tone, due out on PS4. We've imported some of the tracks from this game to bring you a tasty piece of DLC:

Maternal serum amyloid P at 11-13 weeks of gestation and the risk of preterm premature rupture of the fetal membrane. Maternal serum amyloid P (SAP) is a marker for placental dysfunction. The purpose of this study was to investigate whether maternal serum SAP at 11-13 weeks of gestation predicts premature rupture of the fetal membrane (PROM) in low-risk women. Sixty-seven women with intact membranes received serum SAP levels at 11-13 weeks of gestation. Following the first abdominal ultrasound scan, which occurred at 13 weeks, the occurrence of PROM was analyzed. A second scan was performed at 19-23 weeks, and the outcome of the pregnancy was evaluated by using the birth weight, Apgar scores at 1 minute and 5 minutes, and the need for neonatal resuscitation. Twenty-six (38.8%) women had SAP levels >150 mg/L. Twelve of those 26 women (46.2%) had PROM before 27 weeks. In contrast, of the 41 women with SAP levels 150 mg/L compared with those with SAP levels
